

THE ETHICS OF CARING

FINDING PROFESSIONAL RIGHT RELATIONSHIP WITH CLIENTS

Kylea Taylor

ISBN: 978-1-58275-008-5
Publication Date: November 1, 2017

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword by Jack Kornfield
Preface

SECTION I.....The Ethics of Caring™ Model

CHAPTER 1.....Inner Ethics™ and Right Relationship..... 35

Do no harm: Know thyself

Most professional relationships work best when two ethical elements are present

The ethical relationship itself is healing

Learning from ethical missteps

CHAPTER 2.....Honoring the Web of Life..... 39

Why are we doing the work we do?

We are working with more than the individual client

Human interconnection to each other and all living beings

Ethical development requires acknowledgment of relationship

What is “ethics” anyway?

Ethics involves the most interesting areas of life

Moving toward wholeness and congruency

Ethics goes beyond law and guidelines

When are ethical decisions based on relationship rather than abstract principles?

What is ethical behavior?

External vs. internal locus of control

CHAPTER 3.....Considering Our Ethical Vulnerabilities with Compassion and Curiosity..... 51

Why we avoid “ethics”

Awareness and self-compassion are essential to ethical behavior

Curiosity is our ally in approaching self-discovery

Every ethical misstep is driven by a healing impulse

Self-Reflection yields personal as well as professional rewards

CHAPTER 4.....Attending to the Client’s Side of the Professional Relationship..... 55

Power dynamics occur in most helping relationships

Although we don’t really know what the client is experiencing, we can assume the client feels vulnerable

Protection, Permission, Connection: Using power to empower

Protection

Permission

Connection

“Disconnection” in the context of Connection

Assume transference

Chart—Professional Vulnerabilities to Ethical Misconduct.....62

CHAPTER 5.....The Ethics of Caring Model..... 63

A model to help with therapeutic relationships and their challenges

The Centers

The line through the Centers symbolizes right relationship

Right relationship of the client and professional to each other

Each Center has its issues of transference and countertransference.

What are our vulnerabilities as professionals?

Disregard for the client

Professional burnout or compassion fatigue

“It’s my turn!”

Ignorance of the pitfalls

The taboo against sharing our experiences

Preventing ethical missteps

Defending ourselves from feeling unethical

Keys to Professional Ethical Behavior

When we are the most vulnerable to unethical behavior
Each Center holds suggestions for self-reflection

SECTION II.....Profound Client/Professional Relationships and Intense Client Experiences

CHAPTER 6.....When Profound Experiences Occur in the Professional Relationship.....81

Why a professional should know about extraordinary states of consciousness
The continuum between ordinary and extraordinary states
What is an ordinary state of consciousness?
What is an extraordinary state of consciousness?
What is a mild extraordinary state of consciousness?
What is a deep extraordinary state of consciousness?
Extraordinary states do occur spontaneously in ordinary therapy and other professional situations
The expansive experience is healing
Working with the expanded paradigm in the context of religion
The corrective experience: Healing the wounds of omission and commission

CHAPTER 7.....Ethical Attention to Clients' Needs in Extraordinary States..... 97

Ethics in the context of profound work with clients.
Spontaneously occurring extraordinary states of consciousness
The professional relationship itself is what is healing
Extraordinary client states and profound experiences require greater attention to ethics
The need for special competencies in the caregiving professional
The need for greater attention to safety issues
The importance of set and setting
Informed consent for work in extraordinary states
Examples of agreements a client might make are Greater client suggestibility in profound work
Greater client security needs in extraordinary states
The benefit of understanding a regressed client's primary language
Physical touch issues should be considered
Is it sometimes unethical not to touch a client?

Adequate time for integration should be allotted during and after profound experiences

Cognitive dissonance can be greater in profound work

Understanding somatic/psychospiritual crisis

Client's needs for nurturing and spiritual connection

Subtle and compelling countertransference issues

Profound states teach ethics

CHAPTER 8.....Extraordinary Client Experiences and How to Support Them..... 125

Biographical Flashbacks

Trauma re-enactment (abreaction)

Emotionally charged imagery and psychic flooding

Intense energy release phenomena

Deep relaxation and meditation

Contact with archetypal realms

Shamanic trance

Past life experiences

Reliving birth

Out of body experiences

Near death experiences

Unitive experiences and cosmic consciousness

UFO contact and abduction experiences

Multiplicity

Differentiating between an extraordinary state of consciousness and psychosis

An expanded cartography or transpersonal paradigm must underlie all profound work

CHAPTER 9.....Therapeutically-Induced and Other Less Common, More Intense and Profound Experiences..... 151

Inducing extraordinary states therapeutically

Breathwork

Massage and bodywork

Acupuncture

Process-Oriented techniques

Expressive arts therapies

Music therapy, drumming, chanting, and singing

Network Chiropractic

Somatic Experiencing®
EMDR
Meditation and prayer
Hypnosis
Shamanic techniques
Sweat lodge, soul retrieval, fasting
Ingestion of sacred plants
Vision quests

CHAPTER 10.....Ethical Vulnerabilities in Transpersonal Work..... 159

A reminder about self-compassion
Particular vulnerabilities in profound or transpersonal work
The compelling nature of archetypal energies
Clients' experiences affect professionals
Professionals must do their own personal deep work
What qualifies a professional to work with clients in extraordinary states of consciousness?
Group structure vs. individual work with clients
The non-directive therapeutic role in profound work
The need to move flexibly between directive and non-directive roles
The boundaries between client and professional may be more diffuse
The definition of appropriate touch may be different
Our unacknowledged longings (countertransference) for love and spiritual connection Countertransference with a client in a kundalini opening
Kundalini is our essential developmental energy
Countertransference with a client in a psychic opening
Countertransference with a client in a shamanic opening
Countertransference with a client who is multiple Exploitation of the client as a curiosity and a "case"
Who's This For?

SECTION III.....The Seven Centers

CHAPTER 11.....Money—The First Center..... 191

Money—Personal issues in the First Center

Countertransference—The professional's personal desires and fears related to Money

Transference—Client's personal desires and fears related to Money

Countertransference—Professional's spiritual longings and fears related to Money

Transference – Spiritual longings and fears of the client related to Money

Using the energy of Money appropriately

Appropriate use of Money during profound client process

Cross-Referencing issues of Money with the issues of the other Centers

Self-reflection related to Money

CHAPTER 12.....Sex—The Second Center..... 191

Sex—The Second Center

Countertransference—Professional's personal desires and fears related to Sex

Countertransference from fear of sex

Countertransference from desire for sex

Countertransference regarding touch

Transference – Client's personal desires and fears related to Sex

Transference and touching

Countertransference—Professional's spiritual longings and fears related to Sex

Transference – Client's spiritual longings and fears of the client related to Sex

Other intense emotions are related to the Second Center

Using the energy of Sex/Emotion/Body appropriately

Cross-referencing Sex issues with issues in the other Centers

Self-Reflection related to Sex

CHAPTER 13.....Power: The Third Center..... 211

Power—The Third Center

Countertransference—Professional's personal desires and fears related to Power

Transference – Client's personal desires and fears related to Power

Countertransference—Professional's spiritual longings and fears related to Power

Transference – Client's spiritual longings and fears related to Power

Using the energy of Power appropriately
Using the energy of Power appropriately in profound process
Professionals can turn it over to a Higher Power
Using Power to empower
Cross-Referencing Power issues with issues in the other Centers
Self-reflection related to Power

CHAPTER 14.....Love—The Fourth Center..... 225

Love—The Fourth Center
Countertransference—Professional’s personal desires and fears related to Love
Transference—Client’s personal desires and fears related to Love
Countertransference—Professional’s spiritual longings and fears related to Love
Transference – Client’s spiritual longings and fears related to Love
Using the energy of Love appropriately
Using the energy of Love appropriately in profound process
Cross-Referencing Love issues with issues in the other Centers
Self-Reflection related to Love

CHAPTER 15.....Truth—The Fifth Center..... 235

Truth—The Fifth Center
Countertransference—Professional’s personal desires and fears related to Truth
Transference – Client’s personal fears and desires related to Truth
Countertransference—Professional’s spiritual longings and fears related to Truth
Transference—Client’s spiritual longings and fears related to Truth
Using the energy of Truth appropriately
Using Truth appropriately in profound process
Cross-Referencing Truth issues with issues in the other Centers
Self-Reflection related to Truth

CHAPTER 16.....Insight—The Sixth Center..... 245

Insight—The Sixth Center

Countertransference—Professional’s personal desires and fears related to Insight
Transference – Client’s personal desires and fears related to insight Countertransference—Professional’s Spiritual longings and fears related to Insight
Transference – Client’s spiritual longings and fears related to Insight
Using the energy of Insight appropriately

Using the energy of Insight appropriately in profound process
Cross-Referencing Insight with issues in the other Centers
Self-Reflection related to Insight

CHAPTER 17.....Oneness—The Seventh Center..... 253

Oneness—The Seventh Center
Countertransference—Professional’s personal desires, fears, and spiritual longings related to Oneness
Transference—Client’s personal desires, fears and spiritual longings related to Oneness
Countertransference—Professional’s spiritual longings and fears related to Oneness
Transference-Client’s spiritual longings and fears related to Oneness
Using the energy of Oneness appropriately
Cross-Referencing Oneness with issues in the other Centers
Self-Reflection on Oneness

SECTION IV.....Ethical Caregiving in Community

CHAPTER 18.....The Keys to Professional Ethical Behavior..... 265

Caring for ourselves
Caring for our clients
Willingness to examine our own motivations
Willingness to tell the truth
Telling the truth to ourselves
Telling the truth to ourselves about our defense mechanisms
Defense mechanisms can be useful
Telling the truth to our peers
Talking about unethical experiences that are in the past
Talking about our vulnerability to future pitfalls
Talking about ethical vulnerabilities or unethical behavior that is current
What if the unethical action has already occurred?
Telling the truth to clients.
Willingness to ask for help (consultation) and to learn

CHAPTER 19..... Ethics and Dual Relationships..... 289

What is a dual relationship?

What makes a professional relationship ethical is often subtle

The anonymity of urban living vs. village living: the cultural effect on dual relationship ethics

How do we allow for client development within a professional relationship?

Ethical guidelines on dual relationships

Twelve Step recovery group members and dual relationships

Teachers and dual relationships

Clergy and dual relationships

A clergyperson is required to handle multiple roles and relationships

The family doctor and the shaman both had dual (or multiple) relationships

The intricacy of mentoring

Providing protection, permission, and connection throughout the mentoring process

CHAPTER 20..... Ethical Community..... 299

Incentives for ethical community

Punitive consequences as deterrents

Positive inducements as incentives for self-exploration

Ethics in organizations

“Ethical fading”

Reinforcing ethical practices and values

Truth-Telling and organizational integrity

The “leader of a movement” syndrome

Organizational support for personal growth of practitioners

Uniting to defend the ethics and efficacy of a new method

Humane response to ethics problems

Working to change codes as necessary

CHAPTER 21.....Creating Ethical Guidelines..... 317

Expanding ethical consciousness through written ethical codes or agreements

Preambles to ethical codes

Ethical codes and Money (First Center)

Ethical codes and Sex (Second Center)

Ethical codes and Power (Third Center)

Ethical codes and Love (Fourth Center)

Ethical codes and Truth (Fifth Center)
Ethical codes and Insight (Sixth Center)
Ethical codes and Oneness (Seventh Center)
Ethical codes and authentic caring
Ethical codes and willingness to examine our own motivations
Ethical codes and willingness to ask for help
Principles for educators
Skilled analysis of therapeutic and counter-therapeutic interventions in cases of alleged ethical misconduct
Creating our own inner “ethical codes”

Glossary..... 333

References..... 339

Organizations whose work has been helpful in writing this book..... 349

Index.....351

About the author..... 357